

Sri Lanka has been ranked as the first in the south asian region in the Global Food Index 2017. The Global Food Index is published by the United Nations and ranks countries around the world on the basis of food security. This Index is the first to examine food security comprehensively across the three internationally established dimensions. This study looks beyond hunger and underlines factors affecting food insecurity.

For details: http://www.island.lk/index.php?page_cat=article-details&page=article-details&code_title=177399